1.13.1 adaptation type

Explanation	Size	Order	Value Space	Datatype
Nature or genre of the adaptation.	0 or 1	Unspecified	audio representation, tactile representation, text representation, visual representation, audio description, caption, e-book, sign language	Vocabulary
This element describes the kind of alternative presented to the user.

Vocabulary Recommendations
Choose one of the following:

audio description - indicates that the alternative is a spoken description of the visual content in the resource that is being adapted, e.g., "Descriptive Video"

audio representation - indicates that the alternative uses sound to represent the intellectual content in the original access mode of the resource that is being adapted caption - indicates that the alternative is a text caption for the audio component of the resource that is being adapted

e-book - indicates that the alternative is an electronic book text representation - indicates that the alternative uses text to represent the intellectual content in the original access mode of the resource that is being adapted sign language - indicates that the alternate is a sign language interpretation of the intellectual content in the original access mode of the resource that is being adapted visual representation - indicates that the alternative uses visual content to represent the intellectual content in the original access mode of the resource that is being adapted tactile representation - indicates that the alternative uses touch to represent the intellectual content in the original access mode of the resource that is being adapted

Example

Adaptation type:
      audio representation

XML Example

<accmd:adaptationtype>audio representation</accmd:adaptationtype>